

Table of Contents

Table of Cases	xxi
Table of Treaties and Other Instruments	xxvi
List of Abbreviations	xxxix
List of Contributors	xxxv

PART I

1. Introduction	1
Elizabeth Wilmsburt
2. The Nature of War and the Character of Contemporary Armed Conflict	9
Steven Haines
1. Introduction	9
2. Clausewitz and the nature of war	10
2.1. Clausewitz and 'New Wars' theory	13
3. The changing characteristics of modern armed conflict	15
3.1. Regular warfare	16
3.1.1 A fourth generation of war?	18
3.2. Irregular war	21
3.2.1 Insurrection, insurgency, guerilla (and urban guerilla) warfare	21
3.2.2 Complex irregular warfare	22
3.2.3 Advanced irregular warfare	23
3.2.4 Compound warfare	23
3.2.5 Hybrid warfare	23
3.2.6 Criminal warfare and insurgency	24
3.2.7 Terrorism	27
3.3. Cosmopolitan action	27
4. Conclusions	29
3. Classification of Armed Conflicts: Relevant Legal Concepts	32
Dapo Akande
1. Introduction	32
2. History of the distinction between international and non-international armed conflicts	32
3. Consequences of the distinction between international and non-international armed conflicts	34
4. Why does the distinction exist and should it be abolished?	37
5. The scope of application of international humanitarian law: international armed conflicts	39

5.1. Inter-state conflict	39
5.1.1 War	39
5.1.2 Armed conflict	40
5.1.3 Occupation	44
5.2. Self-determination conflicts of national liberation under article 1(4) of Additional Protocol I	49
5.3. Recognition of belligerency	49
6. The scope of application of international humanitarian law: non-international armed conflicts	50
6.1. Common Article 3	51
6.2. Additional Protocol II	54
6.3. A third threshold?	56
7. Foreign intervention in non-international armed conflicts	56
7.1. Foreign intervention on the side of a non-state armed group against a State	57
7.2. Foreign intervention at the invitation (or with consent) of a State against a non-state armed group	62
7.3. Mixed conflicts	63
8. Intervention by multinational forces under UN command or authorized by the UN	64
9. Extraterritorial conflicts with non-state armed groups	70
4. Conflict Classification and the Law Applicable to Detention and the Use of Force	80
Jelena Pejic
1. Introduction	80
2. Applicable law—an overview	81
3. Detention in armed conflict	85
3.1. Internment in armed conflict: international armed conflict	86
3.1.1 POW internment	87
3.1.2 Internment of civilians	88
3.2. Internment in armed conflict: non-international armed conflict	90
3.2.1 Ways forward	95
3.3. Transfer of detainees	97
3.3.1 Ways forward	101
4. The use of force in armed conflict	102
4.1. Rules on the conduct of hostilities in armed conflict	104
4.1.1 Meaning of the term 'direct participation in hostilities'	105
4.2. Use of force in occupied territory	108
4.3. Use of force under human rights law	110
5. Concluding remarks	115
 PART II
5. Northern Ireland 1968–1998	117
Steven Haines
1. Introduction	117
2. General summary of the conflict	119

Table of Contents

xiii

2.1. The rival forces	119
2.1.1 The Security Forces in Northern Ireland (SFNI)	120
2.1.2 Republican groups	121
2.1.3 Loyalist groups	122
2.2. Civil disturbances 1968–1971	123
2.3. Insurgency 1971–1974	124
2.4. Terrorism 1975–1994	127
2.5. Conflict resolution 1994–1998	129
3. Classification of the hostilities	130
3.1. Views of the parties and others on classification	130
3.1.1 The United Kingdom	130
3.1.2 PIRA	131
3.1.3 Others	131
3.2. Analysis of the classification	133
4. The application of force	137
4.1. The ‘shoot to kill’ controversy	138
5. Detention	139
5.1. Internment	139
5.2. Special category status	140
6. Other issues	141
6.1. Weapons issues	141
6.2. Interrogation	142
7. Conclusions	143
Chronology	144
6. The Democratic Republic of the Congo 1993–2010	146
Louise Arimatsu
1. Introduction	147
2. The legacy of Colonialism and the Cold War: March 1993–summer 1996	148
2.1. History	148
2.2. Classification of the conflict	151
2.2.1 Classification of the conflict by the parties and by others	151
2.2.2 Author’s classification	152
2.3. The use of force	154
2.4. Detention	155
2.5. Co-applicability of international humanitarian law and international human rights law	156
3. The First Congo War: from a global site of conflict to a regional one (July 1996–July 1998)	156
3.1. History	156
3.2. Classification of the conflict	160
3.2.1 Classification of the conflict by the parties and by others	160
3.2.2 Author’s classification	162
3.3. The use of force in armed conflict	164
3.4. Detention	164
3.5. The concurrent applicability of international human rights law	166
4. The Second Congo War: Africa’s World War (2 August 1998–July 2003)	167

4.1. History	167
4.2. Classification of the conflict	172
4.2.1 Classification of the conflict by the parties and by others	172
4.2.2 Author's classification	176
4.3. Use of force	181
4.4. Detention	182
4.5. International human rights law	184
5. Transition or repetition? (2003–2011)	185
5.1. History	185
5.2. Classification of the conflict	189
5.2.1 Classification of the conflict by the parties and by others	189
5.2.2 Author's classification	189
5.3. The use of force	192
5.4. Detention	196
5.5. International human rights law	196
6. Conclusion: Framing the DRC within the law	197
6.1. Difficulties of classification	197
6.2. Use of force and detention	199
6.3. Looking to the future	200
Chronology	201
7. Colombia	203
Felicity Szesnat and Annie R. Bird
1. Introduction	203
2. Brief outline of the Colombian hostilities	204
2.1. The 1960s	205
2.2. The 1970s	206
2.3. The 1980s	206
2.4. Early 1990s to 2002	207
2.4.1 Paramilitary groups	208
2.5. 2002 to the present day	210
2.5.1 FARC and ELN	210
2.5.2 Paramilitary groups	211
2.5.3 The emergence of new armed groups	213
2.6. Effects of the armed conflict	214
3. Classification of the Colombian conflict by the relevant actors	214
3.1. Colombia	214
3.2. FARC	215
3.3. ELN	216
3.4. AUC	216
3.5. Other States	216
3.5.1 Ecuador	216
3.5.2 Venezuela	217
3.5.3 The US	218
3.6. Other institutions	219
4. Authors' classification of the Colombian conflict	220
4.1. Has the Colombian armed conflict been 'internationalized' through the intervention of foreign States?	220

Table of Contents

xv

4.2. Recognition of belligerency? The case of FARC	221
4.3. The relationship between paramilitary groups and the Colombian government, as it affects the classification of the armed conflict	223
4.4. Can criminal violence ever qualify as an armed conflict?	225
4.5. Classification of hostilities involving groups active in the Colombian armed conflict	226
5. Rules on opening fire	228
6. Rules on detention	230
7. Operation Phoenix	232
7.1. Classification of Operation Phoenix by the participants and others	233
7.1.1 Colombia	233
7.1.2 Ecuador	234
7.1.3 Responses by other States to Operation Phoenix	235
7.2. Authors' classification of Operation Phoenix	236
7.3. Rules on opening fire in Operation Phoenix	237
7.4. Rules on detention in Operation Phoenix	238
8. Conclusions	239
Chronology	241
8. Afghanistan 2001–2010	242
Françoise J. Hampson
1. Introduction	242
2. October 2011 to the installation of Hamid Karzai	244
2.1. Views of the parties on classification of the hostilities	245
2.1.1 Who were the parties?	245
2.1.2 Classification of the conflict by the parties	249
2.2. Author's view of the classification of the conflicts	251
3. The installation of Hamid Karzai to the present	252
3.1. Views of the parties as to classification of the conflicts	255
3.1.1 Operation Enduring Freedom (OEF)	255
3.1.2 ISAF	255
3.2. Author's view of the classification of the conflicts	256
4. Rules on opening fire	258
5. Rules on detention	263
5.1. First phase of the conflicts: October 2001–June 2002	263
5.2. Second phase of the conflicts: June 2002–present	265
5.3. Transfer	273
6. International human rights law	275
7. Conclusions	276
7.1. Classification	276
7.2. Consequences	277
7.3. In sum	278
Chronology	278
9. Gaza	280
Iain Scobbie
1. Introduction	280

2. Description of the situation	280
2.1. Background	280
2.2. Restrictions relating to Gaza	283
2.3. The aims of Hamas	285
3. The views of States and others on the classification of the conflict	286
3.1. Before disengagement (2000–2005)	287
3.1.1 Israel's views	287
3.1.2 Hamas' views	289
3.2. Israel's disengagement from Gaza (2005 onwards)	290
3.2.1 Israel's views	290
3.2.2 Hamas' views	292
3.2.3 Views of other States	293
3.3. Hamas' accession to power in Gaza (2007)	294
4. Author's analysis of the classification of the conflict (September 2000–March 2011)	295
4.1. Withdrawal of troops leading to termination of occupation?	296
4.2. Inability to carry out obligations of occupier?	297
4.3. Israel's continuing control	298
4.4. A separate conflict with Hamas?	301
5. Rules on application of force	305
6. Rules on capture and detention	308
7. Other significant problems of international humanitarian and human rights law	312
8. Conclusions	314
Chronology	315
10. South Ossetia (2008)	317
Philip Leach
1. Introduction	317
2. The hostilities	318
2.1. Historical context	318
2.2. Events of August 2008	320
2.2.1 The armed conflict	320
2.2.2 The ceasefire agreement	321
2.3. The aftermath of the conflict	322
2.3.1 The buffer zone	322
3. Views of the parties and others on conflict classification	326
3.1. Russia	326
3.2. Georgia	327
3.3. South Ossetia	328
3.4. Other parties	328
3.5. The International Independent Fact-Finding Mission on the Conflict in Georgia (the Tagliavini Report)	330
4. Author's analysis of classification	330
4.1. International armed conflict	330
4.2. A concurrent, non-international armed conflict	332

Table of Contents	xvii
4.3. The extent of Russian control over South Ossetia	334
4.4. Russia's presence in South Ossetia	339
5. Use of force and detention	342
5.1. Domestic law on the use of force, on capture and detention, and other international humanitarian law problems	342
5.2. Treatment of detainees and other significant international humanitarian law problems	344
5.3. Detainees	346
5.4. Russia's responsibilities as an occupying power	348
5.5. The Georgian law on occupied territories	350
6. Conclusions	351
6.1. Difficulties of classification	351
6.2. Consequences of classification for international humanitarian law	353
6.3. Application of human rights law	354
6.4. Impact of classification for application of the law	354
Chronology	355
11. Iraq (2003 onwards)	356
Michael N. Schmitt
1. Introduction	356
2. Classification of the conflict	358
2.1. Phase I: international armed conflict	358
2.1.1 Views of the parties and others	358
2.1.2 Author's analysis of classification	359
2.2. Phase II: belligerent occupation	361
2.2.1 Views of the parties and others	361
2.2.2 Author's analysis of classification	363
2.3. Phase III: non-international armed conflict	367
2.3.1 Views of the parties and others	367
2.3.2 Author's analysis of classification	369
3. Rules on capture and detention	375
4. Rules on use of force	380
5. Other significant problems of international humanitarian law	380
6. Conclusions	384
Chronology	386
12. Lebanon 2006	387
Iain Scobbie
1. Introduction	387
1.1. Context	387
1.2. The initiation and conduct of the hostilities	390
2. The views of the relevant States and others on the classification of the conflict	392
2.1. Israel	392
2.2. Lebanon	394
2.3. Views expressed by other States in the Security Council and other fora	395
2.4. Official UN statements	398

3. Author's analysis of the classification of the conflict	400
3.1. The conflict between Israel and Lebanon	402
3.2. The conflict between Israel and Hezbollah	408
4. The rules governing the application of force	410
5. Rules on capture and detention	413
6. Conclusions	417
6.1. Difficulties of classification	417
6.2. Whether classification had practical consequences	417
Chronology	419
13. The War (?) against Al-Qaeda	421
Noam Lubell
1. Introduction	421
2. Background to the hostilities	421
2.1. Al-Qaeda	424
3. Views of the parties and of others on conflict classification	428
3.1. The United States	428
3.2. Al-Qaeda and territorial States	430
3.3. Other States and entities	430
4. Author's analysis of the classification (or existence) of the conflict	430
4.1. International armed conflict	431
4.2. Non-international armed conflict	434
4.3. Part of pre-existing armed conflict	437
4.4. New type of conflict	439
4.5. No armed conflict	441
5. Rules on application of force	441
6. Rules on detention	444
6.1. Guantánamo and formal detention	445
6.2. Secret detention and detention by proxy	446
7. Rules on other significant problems of international humanitarian law	447
7.1. Drones	447
7.2. Individual status	448
8. Conclusions	451
8.1. Difficulties of classification	451
8.2. Consequences of classification for international humanitarian law	452
8.3. Application of human rights law	453
8.4. Impact of classification for application of the law	454
14. Classification in Future Conflict	455
Michael N. Schmitt
1. Introduction: understanding future conflict	455
2. Cyber warfare	457
3. Transnational terrorism	464
4. Complex battlespaces	469

Table of Contents

xix

5. Law's influence on future conflict	473
6. Conclusions	477

PART III

15. Conclusions	478
Elizabeth Wilmshurst
1. Introduction	478
2. Case studies: problems of classification	478
2.1. Non-international armed conflict	480
2.2. Issues of recognition	483
2.3. Extraterritorial operations against non-state groups	483
2.4. Occupation and hostilities within an occupation	484
2.5. Operations established or authorized by the UN Security Council	486
2.6. Attribution	488
2.7. Mixed or parallel conflicts	489
2.8. Geography	490
3. Case studies: the legal and practical consequences of classification	490
3.1. Few or no consequences	491
3.2. The consequences of classification for the application of force, detention, and other issues of international humanitarian law and international criminal law	493
3.2.1 Application of force	493
3.2.2 Detention	495
3.2.3 International human rights law	496
3.2.4 International criminal law	498
4. Conclusions	499
 Index	 505