Military discipline in war-time

It is for the purpose of meeting war-time demands and producing good results that we are making every effort to maintain military discipline in both exercises and home duties in our peacetime training. But, once we meet with war or intin our peacetime training. But, once we meet with war or intin our peacetime training. But, once we meet with war or intin our peacetime training. Military discipline in the battlefield Roughness of mind and demoralizing act and speech are apt to be found in the battle-field --- for example, such offences against military discipline as an act of violence against a superior or discbedience to orders, and other vicious offences superior or discbedience to orders, and other vicious offences such as locting and rape. This trend will be promoted especially such as locting and miserable conditions of the battle-field, by the dangerous and miserable conditions of the battle-field, by the dangerous and miserable conditions of the commander to imperfect housing facilities and poor supplies. So, in order imperfect housing facilities and poor supplies. So, in order to prevent this trend, it is necessary for the commander to take every opportunity to bring home the real meaning of the take every opportunity to bring home the real meaning, to control sacred war, and to stress education and training, to control and direct his men with fairness, to punish and discipline and direct his men with fairness, to punish and discipline and treatment of actilities.

Fairness in deciding reward and punishment

In war-time, one is apt to feel so much sympathy with the men under his command as to subordinate justice to personal feelings and lose his desire to superintend and direct personal feelings and lose his desire to superintend and direct personal feelings and lose his desire to superintend and direct personal feelings and lose his desire to superintend an idea is apt to them strictly; While, on the other hand, such an idea is apt to spread among his men that, in the battlefield, a minor offence may be overlooked by their superior officer, and that an offence may be overlooked by their superior officer, and that an offence help correlatively to create an unfavorable environment for the help correlatively to create an unfavorable environment for the maintenance of military discipline.

one must have the spirit to make a costly sacrifice in the cause of justice, realizing that it is not to love his men that one should be so much influenced by personal feelings men that one should be so much influenced by personal feelings as to bring about the idea that military discipline may be as to bring about the idea that military discipline may be violated with impunity, and thereby making them commit graver offences.
