Introduction

1. UKLFI, BBUK, ILF and JI join in all of these observations. SWC joins in the observations on inaccuracy and omissions in the Prosecutor's applications for arrest warrants.
2. The issuance of arrest warrants would have obvious implications for the liberty not only of those identified publicly as persons whose arrest is sought, but also of many other Israelis against whom arrest warrants may have been sought, or may be sought, without public disclosure. Moreover, in view of the total inaccuracy of the grounds on which arrest warrants have been sought against Benjamin Netanyahu and Yoav Gallant, according to the summary in the Prosecutor's public statement,¹ Israelis cannot assume that their innocence will avoid the risk of arrest under warrants issued on the basis of false information. Nor can they assume that they will avoid this risk if they are not senior commanders or leaders.² As well as constituting a serious injustice, the resulting restriction on the ability of many Israelis to travel to most countries without fear of arrest could even have significant adverse impacts on the world economy, given the disproportionate contribution made by Israelis to technological innovation.

Jurisdiction

3. References in the footnotes of this section to "Annex" refer to the previously filed Annex to our Request for leave to file observations.³
4. The majority Decision of the Chamber of 5 February 2021 ("the majority Decision")⁴ was based on the Secretary General's acceptance of the deposit of an instrument of accession of Palestine to the Rome Statute. That Decision attached weight to the supposed fact that the Secretary General circulated this instrument among the States Parties before accepting it and that none manifested any opposition, except Canada.⁵ On this view, the existence, content and circulation of the instrument were surely important.
5. Subsequently, the following information came to light:

¹ <https://www.icc-cpi.int/news/statement-icc-prosecutor-karim-aa-khan-kc-applications-arrest-warrants-situation-state>

² See Decision on the request of the Union of the Comoros to review the Prosecutor's decision not to initiate an investigation ICC-01/13-34 https://www.icc-cpi.int/sites/default/files/CourtRecords/CR2015_13139.PDF at §23

³ We suspect that this document has been given the reference ICC-01/18-234-SECRET-Exp-AnxII.1 but the Court has not clarified this.

- (a) The UN Secretary-General did not circulate any purported instrument of accession of Palestine to the Rome Statute among the States Parties before accepting it.⁶ The third sentence of paragraph 100 of the majority Decision is wrong and should not have been relied upon in the second sentence of paragraph 101. This undermines the argument, on which the majority Decision appears to be based, that all States Parties must be taken to have agreed to the accession of Palestine as a State Party.
 - (b) The UN Secretary-General has not circulated a purported instrument of accession of Palestine to the Rome Statute at any time to States Parties. He merely communicated to States Parties on Tuesday, 6 January 2015 that Palestine's accession was (allegedly) effected on Friday, 2 January 2015.⁷
 - (c) Neither the Court⁸ nor the UK⁹ nor, we presume, other States Parties have seen any instrument of Palestine's claimed accession to the Rome Statute.
 - (d) However, it can be inferred from the content of the UN Secretary General's communication, combined with the UN Secretary General's practice, that if there was any instrument, it did not contain any statement as to the territory to which it applied, nor any reference to UNGA Resolution 67/19 or any other UN resolution. If there had been any such statement, it would (we are informed) have been included in the Secretary General's communication, but no such statement was included.¹⁰ This further undermines the conclusion of the majority Decision that, for the purpose of defining the Court's territorial jurisdiction, the territory of the deemed "State of Palestine" must be taken to be that referred to in UNGA Resolution 67/19.
6. Although the supposed instrument of accession, on which the majority Decision is based, has not been produced, it seems unlikely that it was made by those in control of the Gaza Strip at the time, i.e. the terrorist organisation, Hamas. On the other hand, if the instrument was made by Palestinian officials in the West Bank, they were not in control of the Gaza Strip and did not represent the people of the Gaza Strip, where there had been no elections since 2006.

7. In light of the above information:

- (a) The conclusion of the majority Decision, that the States Parties agreed to Palestine's accession to the Rome Statute, is not sound; and
- (b) Even on the basis of the framework adopted in the majority Decision, and even if it is assumed that an instrument of accession was provided to the UN Secretary General by proper representatives of Palestinian authorities in the West Bank, and even if all the States Parties to the Rome Statute must be taken to have agreed to the accession of Palestine, it still does not follow that the accession covered the territory of the Gaza Strip.

8. In any case, we respectfully submit that the whole framework of the majority Decision is erroneous and should be reconsidered. As Judge Kovacs stated in his dissenting judgment, the majority Decision was based on an abridgment of the terms of Art. 12(2) of the Rome Statute that distorted its meaning¹¹ and did not comply with Arts. 31 and 32 of the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties.¹² On any reasonable interpretation of the full text of Art. 12(2) of the Rome Statute in accordance with Art. 31 of the Vienna Convention, the precondition in the first part of its Art. 12(2)(a) is only satisfied where the conduct in question occurred on the territory of a State which is a Party to the Statute. Where these are disputed, a determination must be made by the Court as to whether an entity is a State, whether it is a Party to the Statute, and what is its territory in accordance with applicable international law. We note that a number of States Parties to the Rome Statute do not accept that Palestine is a State or qualified for membership of the UN.¹³
9. Furthermore, it is clear from the travaux préparatoires of the Rome Statute that the jurisdiction of the Court was intended to be based on delegation from the States that are parties to the Statute.¹⁴ Palestine could not delegate criminal jurisdiction over Israeli citizens that it did not have, because this jurisdiction was expressly allocated solely to Israel by Art. XVII(2)c and Annex IV, Art. I(2) of the Oslo II Accord.¹⁵ These provisions do not merely constitute a non-exercise of a supposed criminal jurisdiction of Palestine over Israelis in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, as some have suggested. Annex IV, Art. I(2) expressly provides that “Israel has sole criminal jurisdiction over the following offenses ...”. The categories of offenses which follow cover any offenses committed by Israelis in the West Bank and Gaza Strip.

10. The Oslo II Accord is an international agreement between Israel and the PLO as the representative of the Palestinian people. Even if there exists a State of Palestine (which we respectfully dispute), it is the successor of the PLO and is bound by the Oslo II Accord in the place of the PLO. The Accord was the product of hard-fought negotiations¹⁶ and was a package deal for both sides. Although both Israel and Palestinians have alleged breaches by the other, neither has withdrawn from the accord and it remains in force. Palestine’s response of 4 June 2020 to the Chamber’s Order requesting additional information about a statement made by Mahmoud Abbas on 19 May 2020 rejected the suggestion that this statement declared that the Accord had been annulled.¹⁷ As long as the Accord remains in force, Israel has sole jurisdiction over alleged criminal acts by Israelis in the West Bank and Gaza Strip, and this jurisdiction cannot be delegated to the ICC by the Palestinian Authority, the PLO or any successor State or deemed State.
11. The impact of the Oslo II Accord on the Court’s jurisdiction should not be dismissed on the ground that it is not part of or made under the Rome Statute, especially as Art. 21(1)(b) of the Rome Statute requires the Court to apply applicable treaties where appropriate. The Rome Statute must be considered in the first place under Art. 21(1)(a), but in determining the application of Art. 12(2) of the Statute in this case it is appropriate to apply the provisions on jurisdiction of the Oslo II Accord.
12. Nor should the jurisdiction provisions of the Oslo II Accord be dismissed on the basis of Art. 47 of the 4th Geneva Convention. These provisions do not deprive protected persons of the benefits of that Convention, which do not include any requirement that alleged criminal offences of nationals of an Occupying Power be tried by an international court.

13. Thus, even if the interpretation of Art. 12(2) of the Rome Statute resulting from the application of Art. 31 of the Vienna Convention leaves the meaning ambiguous or obscure, the application of Art. 32 of the Vienna Convention confirms that the Court does not have jurisdiction over Israeli citizens in respect of conduct in the Gaza Strip.
14. The suggestion in the majority Decision that the conflict between its conclusion and the Oslo II Accord can be addressed by consultations under Art. 97 of the Rome Statute¹⁸ is manifestly unsatisfactory. In the first place, it does not in any way cure the lack of jurisdiction if the preconditions of jurisdiction in Art. 12 of the Statute are not satisfied. Secondly, it does not avoid violation of the rights of States that are not parties to the Rome Statute, or of their nationals - including their nationals against whom arrest warrants may have been sought, or may be sought, without public disclosure, as mentioned in §2 above.

Complementarity

15. The Prosecutor failed to take properly into account one of the most foundational principles upon which the Court is governed, that of complementarity.¹⁹ In his announcement that he was seeking arrest warrants, the Prosecutor himself even acknowledged that this principle lies “at the heart of the Rome Statute.”²⁰ In short, the Court may only exercise jurisdiction in circumstances where national legal systems that have jurisdiction fail to act, or fail to do so in a genuine manner.
16. We submit that, in accordance with §10 of the Preamble and Art. 1 of the Rome Statute, this principle applies not only to specific provisions of the Statute on admissibility and initiation of investigations, but also to the exercise of powers such as the extension of an investigation to fundamentally different circumstances and allegations, and the issuance of arrest warrants under Art. 58 of the Statute. The lacuna identified by Profs Yuval Shany and Amichai Cohen²¹ surely cannot have been intended by those who framed the Statute.

17. The State of Israel has a widely respected legal system, including but not limited to the Supreme Court, the IDF Military Advocate General and the Attorney-General, that is robust, independent and capable at all times of conducting impartial investigations in good faith over alleged crimes falling within the scope of the Rome Statute. It has a demonstrated track record of holding officials at the highest levels accountable for serious crimes – including a former President²² and a former Prime Minister.²³
18. Underscoring the IDF's Military Advocate General's robust independence and willingness to conduct bona fide investigations, 74 criminal investigations of alleged wrongdoing relating to military conduct since 7 October have already been initiated, notwithstanding the unprecedented circumstances whereby Israel remains in a state of self-defensive war against the Hamas terror group and other Iranian proxies, and evidence continues to be gathered in a highly challenging and complex urban warfare environment.²⁴
19. Indeed, the Prosecutor himself stated on 29 October 2023 that *"Israel has a professional and well-trained military. They have, I know, military advocate generals and a system that is intended to ensure their compliance with international humanitarian law. They have lawyers advising on targeting decisions, and they will be under no misapprehension as to their obligations, or that they must be able to account for their actions."*²⁵
20. Furthermore, a central tenet of the principle of complementarity is that this Court is to serve as a complement, not a substitute for a national legal system. Reiterating this, on 3 December 2023, following his visit to Israel, the Prosecutor stated that he stands *"ready to engage with relevant national authorities in line with the principle of complementarity at the heart of the Rome Statute."*²⁶ The Prosecutor repeated this point in his Office's April 2024 Policy on Complementarity and Cooperation, when he stressed *"We must also establish ourselves as a strong and effective partner for national authorities."*²⁷

21. However, instead of engaging with the relevant national authorities in Israel, which had been prepared to do so with him and even agreed to host him and his team for high-level discussions on the matter, the Prosecutor circumvented this entirely, by announcing his decision to seek the arrest warrants without prior consultation and by cancelling his arranged visit to Israel to meet Israeli officials at the very last minute.²⁸ Despite reports of this in the media, the Prosecutor has not explained the reasons for his precipitate decision and what urgency existed to make this course of action necessary, particularly given the requirements of Art. 58(1)(b) of the Rome Statute. This raises some deeply troubling procedural questions²⁹ and concerns regarding violation of Art. 18 of the Rome Statute. The Prosecutor's decision to seek arrest warrants, and the manner in which he chose to do so, grossly violate the principle of complementarity; this should also be taken into account in the Court's consideration of the Applications.

Inaccuracy and omissions in the Prosecutor's applications for arrest warrants

22. The Prosecutor's Applications for warrants for the arrest of Netanyahu and Gallant ("the Applications") have not been published, but the Prosecutor made a public statement on 20 May 2024 ("the Statement")³⁰ that purported to summarise and justify them. We assume that the Statement provided a fair and accurate summary of the Applications; if not, this raises additional concerns regarding the reliability of statements by the Prosecutor. These concerns are particularly serious in view of the propensity of false allegations against Israelis to stir up racial and religious hatred throughout the world³¹ and to undermine confidence in international institutions on the part of Israelis, Jews and fair-minded people generally.
23. We have shown in detail in our Request for Leave to Make Observations on Inaccuracies and Omissions in the Prosecutor's Applications for Arrest Warrants ("the UKLFI et al Request"), filed with the Court on 12 July 2024,³² that every phrase of every sentence of the Prosecutor's Statement summarising the allegations against Netanyahu and Gallant is untrue. Israel has not “intentionally and systematically deprived the civilian population in all parts of Gaza of objects indispensable to human survival”. The allegation that a “total siege” was imposed by Israel over Gaza “for extended periods” is false, as is the assertion that this “involved completely closing the three border crossing points ... for extended periods”. Israel did not arbitrarily restrict the transfer of food and medicine through the border crossings after they were reopened. Cross-border water pipelines from Israel to Gaza were not “Gazans’ principal source of clean water” and Israel did not cut them off “for a prolonged period”. Two of the three pipelines were damaged in the Hamas attack of 7 October 2023. Supply was resumed through the third after a few days and through the other two after they were repaired. The allegation that Israel cut off and hindered electricity supplies is misleading. 9 out of the 10 electricity lines into Gaza were damaged in the Hamas attack. Israel ceased to supply electricity through the remaining line to prevent it being used by Hamas for military purposes, but fuel was available in Gaza to generate electricity for essential purposes and Israel permitted further fuel to enter Gaza for these purposes. Israel did not attack civilians “queuing for food”, it did not obstruct aid delivery by humanitarian agencies, and it did not force “many agencies to cease or limit their operations in Gaza” by attacks on aid workers.

24. UKLFI has also published a detailed review (“the UKLFI Review”)³³ of reports of alleged famine in the Gaza Strip, including those on which the Prosecutor appears to have relied in the Applications. The UKLFI Review shows that the reports on which the Prosecutor appears to have relied were based on incomplete information and their conclusions were subsequently officially categorised as “implausible”. Famine was not “present in some areas of Gaza” nor “imminent in other areas”. The comment of the UN Secretary General cited by the Prosecutor appears to have been based on the same misinformation. There is also reason to suspect that the Prosecutor has omitted to include material that casts doubt on the reliability of media and anecdotal accounts that he invokes.³⁴
25. There is clearly insufficient space to include the matters set out in the UKLFI et al Request and the UKLFI Review, and substantiated by the references cited in them, within the page limit permitted by the Chamber in its Decision of 22 July 2024.³⁵ Nevertheless, we respectfully ask the Chamber and the Prosecutor to consider them in full. We submit that it would be a disgraceful dereliction of duty if the Court and the Prosecutor were to ignore them. It would call into question the integrity of the Court, its processes and its Prosecutor.

26. The wholesale inaccuracy of the Prosecutor's allegations against Netanyahu and Gallant, demonstrated by the UKLFI et al Request, is not controverted by the advice given to the Prosecutor by a "panel of experts in international law". It is not clear what status, if any, they have or on what legal basis or authority their advice has been provided.³⁶ In any event, it appears that they were asked to form and did form the views they expressed on the basis of the same material provided to them by the Office of the Prosecutor as that on which the Applications were also based. Since that material was evidently inaccurate and omitted relevant information, their Report is equally unfounded and cannot validate the Applications.
27. Since the factual allegations summarised in the Statement (and presumably relied upon in the Applications) are completely false, they do not provide "reasonable grounds to believe that [Netanyahu or Gallant] has committed a crime within the jurisdiction of the Court" as required by Art. 58(1)(a) of the Rome Statute, even if the Court has the required territorial jurisdiction and if the issuance of the warrants is compatible with the principle of complementarity (both of which are disputed by UKLFI, BBUK, LFI and JI).
28. As well as negating the alleged crimes, the true facts also show that it is not necessary at the present time to arrest Netanyahu or Gallant for any of the purposes specified in Art. 58(1)(b) of the Rome Statute.
29. It is highly undesirable to restrict the liberty of any person who, in accordance with Art. 66 of the Rome Statute, is presumed innocent until proved guilty, without proper cause and need. In all cases, the Court has a high responsibility to scrutinise applications for arrest warrants stringently and to examine with utmost care whether the criteria in Art. 58(1) of the Rome Statute are fully met.
30. This responsibility is even graver where applications are made to arrest a democratically elected Prime Minister and Defence Minister, when they are currently leading their country in highly complex wars against genocidal enemies, that expressly seek the extermination of their people – a people that suffered, and has not yet recovered from, a genocide less than a century ago. The arrest of its key leaders, and even the disruption of their work by forcing them to take steps to avoid arrest, would be liable to prejudice the conduct of the wars and could even jeopardise the survival of the country and its people.

31. In these circumstances, if there is any risk that the Applications might be inaccurate or might omit material information or evidence, the Court should ensure that these deficiencies are corrected before making any decision on whether to grant them. Since we have filed and drawn the Court’s attention to information and evidence demonstrating that every phrase of every sentence of the Prosecutor’s Statement summarising his allegations against Netanyahu and Gallant is untrue, this responsibility requires the Court to address these materials fully.
